

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people in the public sector who are employed in health care has increased from 2.5 million to 3.5 million (Department of Health 2000).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is the increasing demand for health care services. The population of the UK is increasing, and the number of people who are aged 65 and over is increasing rapidly. This has led to an increase in the number of people who are in need of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

Another reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the private sector. The private sector is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The private sector is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A third reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the voluntary sector. The voluntary sector is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The voluntary sector is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A fourth reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the government. The government is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The government is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A fifth reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the public. The public is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The public is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A sixth reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the private sector. The private sector is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The private sector is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A seventh reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the voluntary sector. The voluntary sector is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The voluntary sector is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.

A eighth reason for the increase is the increasing demand for health care services from the government. The government is becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The government is also becoming increasingly important in the provision of health care services, and this has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector.